I. RATIONALE

Man has always produced art, in a variety of forms, long before recorded history. Art has fulfilled many vital personal and social needs. Before language and writing were developed, the visual arts, and signs or symbols provided the most universally understood means for communication. Decorations and embellishments were produced to not only personalize and identify objects, but also to establish rank in society, ownership, quality and power. By studying the works of art of any period, we can better understand the life and culture of the people who produced them, or the patrons they served. The values of a society are often reflected in the styles and functions of the art which it produced. The serious student will learn how to identify the principle characteristics of the various periods and styles of art, and how the contemporary uses of art and design derive from the past.

II. GENERAL COURSE GOALS

After completing the course, the student should:

A. Understand and use correct terms in describing and identifying art objects.

B. Be able to describe correctly the materials or techniques used in producing paintings, sculpture, architecture, fabrics, crafts items, and other works of art and design.

C. Be able to list, or describe with reasonable accuracy, the principle characteristics of any given work of art.

D. Be able to identify the period in which a given work of art was produced, and describe some of the cultural aspects which prevailed at the time, for each of the following:

VI. VOCABULARY

Many of the terms used in Art, or in describing Art, or the tools and techniques for producing Art, are unique. Some are so unusual that they are not part of everyday or common language. If you hear a word or phrase which is strange, or not clear to you, make a note of it, and ask for an explanation at an appropriate time in the discussion period.
